The DIRECTORY covers the whole of the ports and cities of the Far East, from Penang to Vladivostock, in which are gathered sojourners from the West.

Not only is the Directory most full and complete in each case, but it is prefered by DE. SCRIPTONS of each Colony, Port, or Settlement, carefully revised each year, some of which, such as those of Hongkong and Shanghai, will serve as perfect and accurate Guines for the Tourist, giving as they do every detail in connection with the places, their History and Topography, &c., &c.

The Information afforded in these Descriptions alone would suffice to fill an ordinary volume, consisting of over Eighty highly interesting articles, packed with facts concisely set out, and containing statistics of the TRADE of each Country and Port.

the family (at least in part) depended for support. I am a dressmaker, and it will be easily understood how hard my life was, for I didn't think it would last much longer. Not long ago (May, 1887) I made up my mind to try a medicine that is advertised and known all over the country. I mean Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup. I had no faith in it at first, for how can one believe in what one knows nothing about? I bought and tried. Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup only because of its reputation. How could so many people, I asked myself, praise a medicine so much if it had no virtue? I can only say that I found what they said to be true. After beginning with the Syrup, relief soon followed. My food digested better and gave me strength, and by persevering with it all my pains disappeared. I could eat my food with a relish and everything agreed with me. Now and again when, through confinement and hard work. I feel a touch of my old complaint I take a dose or two of Seigel's Syrup and the trouble goes no further. CHAPTER III. Father, I counted it up. Every mile of the distance I counted it. And I reckoned every hour since my wife's letter had been written against the progress and period of my boy's disease. So many days since the date of the letter, and Noel had been siling and ill so many days before that. The prosa sum of those days was so much, and in that time the affection; if it ran the course I looked for, must have reached such and such a stage. While I toiled along over the broad wastes of that desolate land seemed to know, at any moment what the condition must be at the utmost and best of my boy in his bed at home. Then I reckoned the future as well as the past. So many days it would take me to ride to Tangier. so many hours to cross from Tangier to Cadiz. so many days and nights by rail from Cadis to London. The grand total of time past since my poor Noel first became unwell, and of time to come before I could reach his side, would be so much. What would his condition be then ? knew that also. It would be so and so.

Thus, step by step I counted it all up. interval would be long, very long, between the beginning of the attack and my getting home. but not too long for my hopes. All going wel with me I should still arrive in time. If the disease had taken an ovil turn my boy might perhaps be in its last stages. But then I would be there and I could save him. The operation which I had spent five years of my life to master would bring him back from the gates of death

Father, I had no doubt of that, and I had no doubt of my calculations. Lying here now it seems as if the flends themselves, must have shricked to see me in that far-off land gambling like a fool in the certainty of the life I loved, and reckoning nothing of the hundred poor chances that might snuff it out like a candle. Call it fronzy, call it madness, nevertheless, i kept my heart alive and saved me from despair: But O. the agony of my impatience! If any thing should stop me now! Let me be one day later, only one, and what might not occur! Then how many were the dangers of delay! First there was the possibility of illness overtoking me. My health was not better, but worse han when I left home. I was riding from sunrise to super-t, and not sleeping at nights. No matter ! I put all fear from that cause away from me Though my limbs refused to bear me up, and inder the affliction of my nerves my muscles lost the power to hold the rains, yet if I could be slung on to the back of my horse I should still

But I remembered the admission of the English Consul at Tangier that a stranger might offend the superstitions of the Muslems unwittingly: I recalled his parting words of counsel, spoken half in 'jest," Keep out of a Moorish prison:" and the noisome dungeon into which the young Berber had been cast arose before my mind in visions of horror. What precentions I took to avoid these dangers of delay would be a long and foolish story. Also, it would be a mean and abject one, and I should be ashamed to tell it. How I saluted every source begger on the way with the salutation of his faith and country; how I dismountad as I approached a town or a village, and only returned to the saddle when I had gone through it: how I uncovered my head-in ignorance of Eastern quetom-as I went by a saint's honse. and how at length (remembering the Jawish ba ker who was besten) I took off my shoes and walked barefoot as I pas ed in front of a mosquo. Yes, it was I who paid all this needless homage: I whose pride has always been my bane; who could not bend the knee to be made: knight: I who have felt humility before no man. Even so it was. was studying the faces and grovelling at the feet of that race of ignorant fanatics. But the worst of my impediments were within my own camp. The American was right. The Moor cannot comprehend a disinterested action. My foolish homage to their faith awakened the auspicions of my men. When they had tried in vain to fathom the meaning of it, they agreed to despise me. I did not heed their contempt. but I was compelled to take note of its coussquences. From being my servants, they became my masters. When it pleased them to encamp had to rest, though my inclustion was o go on, and only when it suited them to set out again protest and plead, and threaten. The Moor is your turn will have to pay with your life to the you come to Tangier. A servant of my own often a brave man, but these men were a gang of white-livered poltroons, and a blow would have served to subdue them. With visious of a Moorish prison before my eyes I dared not to raise my hand. One weapon alone could I, in my own cowardice, employ against them-bribes, bribes, bribes. Such was the sole instrument with which I combated their laziness, their duplicity, and their deceit.

Father, I was a pitiful sight in my weakness and my impatience. We had not gone for out of Fea when I observed that the man. Larby was at the heels of our company. This slarmed me, and I called to my guide. "Alee," I said, "who is that evil-looking my sick buy who was dying for want of the?
